Plymouth OK's new liquor license request

Don Howard
Staff Writer

> The number of bars in the 2-square mile downtown business section is also a hot button issue with many residents.

Members of the Plymouth Liquor License Review Committee (LLRC) approved the request of George Stefanakis and his sons for a Class C Liquor License for a new bar in the basement of the former bank building at 306 Main St. The request was also unanimously approved by members of the Plymouth City Commission.

Stefanakis, the owner of Greek Islands Eatery, received a Class C Liquor License at that establishment in March of 2018. The new license is for a second establishment and the owners of Greek Islands have made application to the state Liquor Control Commission seeking permission for a new bar, entertainment permit and extended hours. The application with the state is still pending.

Because the city maintains a Liquor Management Ordinance related to the operation of all Class C licenses, the review committee is required to make a recommendation to the city commission related to applications, renewals and revocations. After a brief discussion, the committee members approved the Greek Islands' request and sent the recommendation on to the city commission for consideration. The site plan for the new business was previously OK'd by the planning commission, officials said.

Stefanakis waited six years for the current Class C license and at the time it was approved, he said the restaurant was "only looking at (serving) a small amount of beer and wine...." The restaurant opened in 2012.

Stefanakis and his sons told the members of the LLRC members last week that the plans for the new bar include a

Rolling along
Area landmark is topic of new book

Julie Brown

Anyone traveling along Interstate 94 through Allen Park, has seen "Giant Tire," which originated as a Ferris wheel for the 1964-65 New York World's Fair.

"You cannot go there and pose for a picture," said author and historian Steven J. Frey, whose "The Giant Tire: From New York World's Fair to Detroit Landmark" details the history of the landmark.

Frey entertained a crowd June 24 at the Plymouth District Library and answered audience questions about his sources.

"I had to do quite a bit of digging," said Frey, noting records from the New York World's Fair are largely lost.

Frey showed a number of 35mm slides that evening, "just like Dad used to show slides." He was surprised at how many photos he was able to find on eBay, even one that had been in Portugal for years.

"As much as I hate Facebook, it was beneficial in finding people to talk to," including a woman he's befriended who worked at the fair. Frey said he enjoys the 1960s slides, "I look at the people, see what they're wearing."

Plymouth District Library Adult Services Librarian Marjorie Sadler was excited to hear Frey speak.

"His latest book struck a chord with me. I was thrilled when he agreed to speak here," she added, noting her family enjoys unusual roadside attractions.

At the fair, the giant tire was used as a Ferris wheel with four passengers per gondola, and an amputation risk that required additional safety measures.

The tire on the outskirts of New York City intrigued Plymouth listeners, who also learned about domestic automakers present at the fair.

"It was U.S. Rubber's way of showcasing their products," said Frey, adding the 1964 Ford Mustang debuted at the fair.

Nearby that fair attraction was the Sinclair Dinosaur, with Frey noting, "I don't know if the Sinclair people were happy" with the tire dominating fairgrounds. One engineering firm built its static portions, another the mechanical parts.

The tire is about 80 feet tall, and the Ferris Wheel portion was taken to Atlantic City, New Jersey and was then

Landfill manager promises odor mitigation efforts

> Some of the issues reported to us have been headaches, nausea, eye irritation, light-headedness and trouble breathing,

Mark Johnson, the new general manager at Advanced Disposal Services, got less than a warm welcome at a recent Northville Township Board of Trustees meeting.

"Enough is enough," Northville Township Supervisor Robert Nix said, after Johnson explained his "plan of action" at Arbor Hills landfill. "This has gone on long enough. It needs to be fixed and you need to be successful. Going back to 2015, we had one, maybe two, complaints a year. Nothing like we're having now," Nix said.

Members of the board have received thousands of complaints about the stench from the landfill since 2015. A recent township meeting drew a large crowd of homeowners who protested and complained about the smell to township officials and threatened legal action if some remedial action was not taken.

Landfill officials have blamed weather and other factors for the increased odor problems at the nearly 20-year-old facility which had generated few complaints until 2015. Since that time, complaints from residents have increased steadily, as has the smell, officials said.

"You talk about weather and other causes. Prior to 2015, we had weather and everything else that is going on today, without the violations," Nix said.

Johnson told the officials that his 30-year career included successful landfill problem mitigation and that the new team at Arbor Hills had already taken come corrective action with successful results. He said that the annual operating budget at the landfill had been increased from $1.6 million to between $8 and $10 million.

"There has been significant improvement from March until now," Johnson told the board. "That said, we still have work to do and there may continue to be issues that impact our neighbors. I am personally doing everything I can to minimize those impacts."

The president of the Stop Arbor Hills Conservatory group said that residents have continued to report problems at the landfill since June 1 and that several have reported physical symptoms which they believe are caused by the odors and gas discharged from the facility.

"Some of the issues reported to us have been headaches, nausea, eye irritation, light-headedness and trouble breathing," Lassel said. "Members of an outside contracting team told the family they were working for that they couldn't believe how bad (the odor) was.

"It's time to stop the excuses. Take accountability and fix the problems (that are causing the odors)," he said.

Johnson said during his introduction that there were "zero" health risks related to the odors at the landfill.

I've been doing this for a very long time and I am committed to getting this fixed," he said. "I am going to get it fixed. We've made progress already, but progress is one thing and completion is another. We've gone from 400 (complaint) calls to 10. But 10 is still too many," Johnson concluded.

Plant to bring 440 jobs

Elected officials and leaders from Webasto Roof Systems, Inc, celebrated the ground breaking for a new plant recently that is expected to bring 440 jobs to Plymouth

Webasto Roof Systems, Inc. is a leading global supplier of automotive systems for all types of vehicles, and Hillside Investments LLC., a regional developer specializing in office and industrial based commercial real estate, hosted the ceremony to unveil construction of the new manufacturing facility.

The new 300,000 square-foot, $40 million state of the art plant, located at 14200 Haggerty Road, features an environmentally-friendly design that maximizes the flow of natural light throughout the entire building, officials said. Webasto plans on creating approximately 440 positions for people who will work in the new facility in addition to current employees already based in the greater Plymouth area. One of the primary goals of the workforce expansion is to maximize efficiency between Webasto's many business units by creating a collaboration-friendly environment, a spokesman noted.

Webasto North America CEO and President Andre Schoenekaes and Hillside CEO Jaimey Roth were joined by elected officials and business leaders from throughout metro Detroit.

torn down. Frey calls it a Detroit landmark, which ended up here due to fair stipulations on removing exhibits.

"Could you imagine the publicity" if the big tire went into a landfill? Frey asked. The Uniroyal red and white logo was affixed, with Michelin now owning that brand.

It's well built and bolted to the ground, said Frey, a Dearborn Heights resident who works for a defense contractor. He noted Melvindale High School teens have broken into the structure, which he describes as allowing light through from bullet holes and arrowhead holes.

In 1966, the tire pieces of steel were shipped on 21 trucks to metro Detroit. He has a piece of it as a relic, as well as an old light from the top used for aircraft safety: "I was there the day they changed the light and I snagged it," he said.

It's reflective similar to road signs, said Frey. He recalls an inflatable ArmorAll large bottle being set up nearby years ago during a power wash, as well as a December 2018 round banner for a local football game affixed to the tire.

"It was interesting," said attendee Dee Winter of Plymouth. Her Plymouth Questers group has studied the World's Columbian Exposition, so Winter enjoyed the parallels.

Frey noted it costs some $8,000 a year to maintain the structure, which has no public access and was redone in 1994. Only the outer panels came from New York, and it has newer steel.

At the New York World's Fair, some other exhibits didn't comply with requirements to take them down. "Some of them left them in place. They had to have legal action taken against them," said Frey.

"I have an interest in forgotten history and history hiding in plain sight. I am especially interested in things that have more urban legend associated with them, than the actual facts, then learning the real story behind the rumors, and then being the one to 'set the record straight'. Sort of like having bragging rights," Frey said.

Frey's book is available at www.GiantTire.info.

"speakeasy" theme and will be called "Ebenezer." Stefanakis said the new basement bar would only be accessible to customers from the alley entrance at 305 Fleet St. and would have a 76-seat capacity after it is completely remodeled.

Stefanakis' plans call for an "upscale specialty cocktail and dessert bar...with a "small menu with cold cuts and finger foods…live entertainment consisting of local small combos only on certain weekends…no dance floor, no televisions of any sort or loud music."

Greek Islands Eatery has joined the ranks of several other Plymouth establishments that sought "permits" for additional bar/restaurant operations rather than seeking often-expensive new MLCC licenses. Class C licenses issued under the traditional quota system are transferable. One recently listed class C liquor license in Wayne County was advertised for $80,000, and the owner offered land contract terms by a Michigan liquor license broker.

According to the state department of licensing and regulatory affairs, Stefanakis owns eight restaurant corporations under the name Greek Islands. The Plymouth location was incorporated in 2011 under the name G. I. Poros, Inc.

The MLCC traditional Class C liquor license quota system limits the number of new on-premises liquor licenses to one for every 1,500 people living in a municipality. There are a total of 30 liquor licenses in Plymouth, a city with a population of just over 9,000.

Plymouth Police Chief Al Cox said the police department had no issue with the restaurant during the 12 months they have had a beer, wine and liquor license.

City Manager Paul Sincock said that since the business owners had previously gone to the planning commission for site plan approval, parking was the only open issue on the table. Greek Islands owners paid the city $35,000 for 3.5 parking spaces under the provisions of the payment in lieu-of-parking system which requires business establishments to pay $10,000 per parking spot.

> "The MLCC traditional Class C liquor license quota system limits the number of new on-premises liquor licenses to one for every 1,500 people living in a municipality. There are a total of 30 liquor licenses in Plymouth, a city with a population of just over 9,000.

Parking is a hot issue with Plymouth business owners and residents alike. Owners of the Meeting House Grand Ballroom, 499 S. Main St., raised their concerns at the committee meeting explaining the constant problems with people parking in their parking lot.

The number of bars in the 2-square mile downtown business section is also a hot button issue with many residents.

Two long-time downtown residents in the audience expressed their strong displeasure with the new restaurant plan.

Delores Davis, who has lived on Penniman for the past 13 years, said she is frustrated. Davis asked the committee members what was to be done about all the bars in the downtown area. After the meeting she said she was concerned they're putting "too many bars in a small area."

"It's a concept now-just add a bar to a license," she said. Davis quickly named the several downtown bars that operate on one license.

"Now there's going to be five bars on Penniman -in one block," said Davis.

Davis said she thought the comment by the police chief was comical. Responding to Cox' remarks about no-problems at Greek Islands, she laughed, "People don't order a beer with their breakfast-that's why there's no problems."

Twenty-year Adams Street resident Anita Strach also had some comments about the new bar venture.

"It's more than the traffic, but when the bars close we hear all the noise and motorcycles as the people take the back streets to avoid the cops. This is going to be another 'Hoochie Mama' bar. Do we need a basement bar," she said. "They said, 'We want to put Plymouth on the map,' They don't give a s about the people who live here," she said.

"We have no reason to recommend non-approval. It's been to all the boards and passed," Sincock said after the discussion.

Members of the Plymouth City Commission met immediately following the LLRC meeting and also unanimously approved the Greek Islands request.

"They applied, they received approval. We handled this like we handle any other liquor approval," Sincock said after the meeting.

BELLEVILLE - ROMULUS

Convention brings thousands into Belleville

Businesses in Romulus, Belleville, Canton Township and surrounding areas are receiving a boost to their bottom line this summer from the "Love Never Fails" convention series, according to organizers of the event. The meeting of Jehovah's Witnesses, which started in May, is bringing an estimated 32,000 visitors during 15 weeks to the Assembly Hall located at 43777 Ecorse Road in Belleville.

Throughout the summer, convention delegates, mostly from the Midwest, are filling local area hotels, restaurants and stores Thursday through Sunday evenings. The region has experienced similar boosts since 2015. Prior to that, yearly conventions were hosted primarily at the Seagate Center in Toledo, Ohio and at the former Pontiac Silverdome.

Participating hotels are reporting "a significant increase" for the 15-week stretch. In fact, Raquel Rubalcado, director of Sales at the Hampton Inn Detroit/Belleville-Airport Area, said "when the delegates are attending the convention, they most definitely are boosting up the local economy while shopping at Walmart, Meijer's and eating at the local restaurants here in Belleville community area."

She said there is even a non-monetary boost in morale as, "The housekeepers, front desk and management team adore the delegates…We share their handwritten notes and comments, which are posted in the back office for all the staff to see and read."

Restaurateurs are also benefiting from the influx of visitors. According to Twisted Rooster Manager Natalie Bates, "We have seen quite a shift in sales when the conventions are in town. I'd say they make up at least 50 to 60 percent of guests we have in on the weekends from June-August."

Though the convention series is revenue generating for Wayne County businesses, it itself is free of charge, supported entirely by non-tithed donations. In addition to English language sessions from May-July, August conventions will offer Spanish, American Sign Language, Mandarin Chinese and Korean.

The annual Love Never Fails convention is expected to draw 32,000 Jehovah's Witnesses to the Belleville Assembly Hall on Ecorse Road this summer.

Township residents protest proposed new hotel

Concerns of nearby residents apparently convinced a developer to scuttle plans for a $6 million hotel on the I-94 Service Drive in Van Buren Township.

Nearly 40 residents from the Dewitt Street area appeared at a public meeting at Van Buren Township Hall recently to hear from Bharat Patel, the developer who had planned to construct the four-story hotel. Residents spoke for about an hour, criticizing the plans as part of the township public participation process that allows communication of the public prior to the beginning of a township project.

Van Buren Township Planning and Economic Development Director Ron Akers said that no official plans had been filed with the township for the construction and that Patel agreed to hear the public comments prior to proceeding with the project. The parcel of land in question is zoned for hotel useage.

Patel had planned to construct a Comfort Suite hotel with 90 rooms, each costing guests $100 per night. He said the project would have no minibars and no food service, but that shuttles would be available to the nearby Metro Airport every two hours. The project included 94 parking spaces and the entry to the hotel would be on the south service drive.

Patel said he has not yet purchased the property where the proposed hotel would be constructed, but that the negative feedback from the residents would be factored into the final decision about the project.

He indicated that his company had looked at other sites in the Belleville which might accommodate the proposed hotel.

Former priest facing sexual misconduct charges

A former Westland priest is facing charges of third-degree criminal sexual conduct involving a man in his 20s whom he was counseling at the former St. Theodore of Canterbury Church in Westland.

Patrick Casey, 55, faces 15 years in prison if convicted of the felony charges. Casey also served as a priest at St. Thomas a'Becket Catholic parish in Canton Township before moving to the Westland church in August of 2012.

Michigan Attorney General Dana Nessel named Casey as one of five men once priests charged with 21 counts of criminal sexual conduct in May.

According to court documents, Casey, who became an ordained priest in 1997, was counseling a 24-year-old man from St. Thomas. The two met after the man was denied confession at the Canton church as he had not completed his religious instruction. He emailed Casey seeking spiritual guidance as he was in "great emotional turmoil." He asked to speak with Casey, even if only a phone conversation. The two met and then communicated for several months on topics including the teachings of the Catholic Church. The unidentified man told Casey during one of their first meetings that he was gay, the documents state. He further confessed to having attempted suicide.

During one meeting, according to court documents, during which Casey agreed to hear the young man's confession, he told the 24-year-old that he, too, was gay and told him that he could not have a gay relationship and go to heaven. Casey, in clerical garb, allegedly instigated sexual conduct with the young man while the confessional session continued.

The young man reported the incident to the Catholic Church prompting an investigation by the Archdiocese of Detroit. During an interview with Casey, he admitted to the sexual acts and he was dismissed from the clerical state on Aug. 1, 2018.

St. Theodore of Canterbury merged with St. Damian and Divine Savior churches, also in Westland, in 2016 to form the St. Mary, Cause of Our Joy Catholic Church, 8200 N. Wayne Road.

Art-O-Motive
Car hood painting contest returns

The Art-O-Motive car hood design contest will return to Downtown Days in Wayne this year.

This will be the second year for the competition which will feature installations designed by local artists and designers. Installations will be on display during Downtown Days Aug. 9-10 at Veterans Plaza in Downtown Wayne.

Art-O-Motive organizers for Downtown Days are seeking to bring together local artists and the larger community to celebrate the automotive legacy of the City of Wayne, a spokesman noted, while also giving local artists the opportunity to participate in a fun, grassroots design contest. Each artist is asked to create a display that uses a car hood as the canvas for their design. The Art-O-Motive contest was started in 2018 for the purpose of bringing more art opportunities to Downtown Days. Last year, the contest was an overwhelming success, with more than 10 local artists participating, according to Wayne Main Street officials.

Each car hood will be on display so residents and guests will have an opportunity to view all of the displays.

"We want to give local artist an opportunity to showcase their talents right here in Wayne, and this wonderful contest is an opportunity to do just that" commented Maxwell Cameron, executive director of Wayne Main Street. Organizers will also host a voting contest, where community members have an opportunity to cast their vote for their favorite design. Contest winners will be announced at 6 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 10. First, second, and third place winners will receive a cash prize. Art-O-Motive is just one of the art-focused programs happening at Downtown Days. For a full schedule of events, visit downtownwayne.org/downtowndays.

Artists have only until tomorrow, July 12 to register for the competition. While car hoods are still available, the event is filling up fast. Artists interested in participating in the contest can view the rules and regulations by visiting www.downtownwayne.org/downtowndays or by calling the Wayne Main Street office at (734) 629-6822. The registration fee is $50 per entry.

An stylized elephant was one display during Art-O-Motive last year.

Downtown Days began in 2016 and since then has become the Wayne Main Street signature summer event. In 2019 Downtown Days will take place at Veteran's Plaza, in the heart of downtown Wayne. The event this year is especially significant as 2019 marks the sesquicentennial anniversary of the City of Wayne. To help celebrate this important milestone, Downtown Days will feature a 150th Birthday Celebration.

Downtown Days 2019 will feature an exciting lineup of family-friendly live music entertainment, food vendors, the flea market/community garage sale, and a number of art-focused programs, including the Third Annual Window on Wayne photography contest, and the Detroit Institute of Art Drop-In workshop. Organizers estimate that Downtown Days will draw 4,000-5,000 visitors from Wayne and surrounding communities.

CANTON - NORTHVILLE

Canton Lions Club awards $2,000 scholarship

The Canton Loins Club recently awarded a $2,000 scholarship to Jacob Ooms, 18, a graduate of Plymouth High School.

Ooms will be attending Michigan State University this fall to pursue his degree in nursing. He earned a 3.7 grade point average in high school while working at Holiday Market and also played baseball.

The Canton Lions award two $2,000 scholarships annually for tuition, books or campus housing to an accredited trade or business school, college or university. Scholarships are awarded to students who have contributed to the community throughout their high school experience. Preference is given to sight and/or hearing impaired students.

Canton Lions President Ron Sullivan said Lions need to support youth whenever possible.

'Jacob represents the best of youth and we are extremely proud of what he has accomplished in his academic endeavors. I think his future will be bright and he will lead others in and out of college to seek their full potential," Sullivan said.

Ooms and his parents, Robert and Cathy, attended the award ceremony recently. Ooms has two brothers, Jared and Noah, along with a sister, Ariel, and the family live in Canton.

The Canton Lions Club comprises diverse individuals who come together at Rose's Restaurant on the fourth Monday of the month to assist those less fortunate in the community. For additional information on the Canton Lions Club call Lion Bill Van Winkle (734) 254-9404 govbill1@outlook.com.

Northville OK's purchase of patrol car equipment

Members of the Northville City Council recently approved several purchases and upgrades to equipment in the police department.

At a recent meeting, council members approved the purchase of six replacement Mobile Data Computers for police patrol vehicles at a cost of $15,116. The purchase include antenna docking stations and screen stiffeners from Dell, using Oakland County-CLEMIS contract pricing.

City patrol vehicles each have a Mobile Data Computer (MDC) that allows access to various law enforcement databases and networks. The computers are linked with the city dispatch center to allow two-way information flow as well as global positioning satellite capabilities. Police use the computers to input information from their vehicle, which maximizes patrol time and keeps officers on the street, officials said. The current equipment is 5-years-old and is starting to have connectivity and reliability issues, according to police officials.

Council members also approved the expenditure of $3,644 to purchase six printers with a 3-year service contract, USB cables, car adaptors, mounting brackets, Mag Tek SureSwipe readers, and receipt paper.

The purchase will be made from CDW-G through the State of Michigan Master Computing - MiDEAL contract.

The purchase of new modems for patrol vehicles from the same vendor was also approved in the amount of $6,120, secured from the same vendor and process. Installation will be an additional $3,000 for a total cost of $9,120.
